

Erica Jansson is a fourth-year in the Evening Program at Southwestern Law School and Editor in Chief of the Southwestern Law Review. Ms. Jansson hopes to pursue a career in civil and appellate litigation with a particular emphasis on constitutional law. While attending Southwestern, Ms. Jansson worked as a law clerk for Carpenter Rothans & Dumont, a firm that specializes in governmental tort defense. In the summer of 2019, she externed for the Honorable Philip Gutierrez of the Central District of California, and just recently, she accepted an offer for post-bar employment at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher.

Ms. Jansson is also pursuing a scholarly agenda, focusing on constitutional issues raised throughout criminal law and criminal justice reform efforts. Her student note Testing the Scope of Status will be published in the first issue of the 50th Volume of the Southwestern Law Review, and she is currently co-authoring an article with her professor and mentor Danielle Hart.
