COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

International Art Law (1 unit)

Examines international legal issues of art as creative endeavors, articles of commerce, and cultural artifacts. We will examine sales, dealer/auctioneer duties; sales and import taxes; recovery of plundered artworks; and copyright (and other) protections.

International Entertainment Law (2 units)

Provides an overview of the international legal issues when representing clients in music, publishing, film, etc. Topics include rights acquisition, celebrity name and likeness, fans' rights, IP and other protections, business/contract issues, censorship, and professional responsibility.

International Music Law (1 unit)

Compares key differences in the business and legal issues between the recorded music industry of the United States and other countries, including record deals, producer agreements, and other agreements governing creative relationships.

Negotiating and Drafting International Entertainment Contracts (2 units)

Provides a foundational understanding of the entertainment industry in a global marketplace, key players, various negotiation styles, and transactional agreements. Students will draft provisions and whole contracts for professor feedback.

International Refugee and Asylum Law & Policy (2 units)

Introduces fundamentals of refugee and asylum law, protections, and the underlying policies. Focus on women and children escaping gang violence and gender-based harm. Explores what leads people to flee and countries' response to those seeking refuge.

The Law Of, In, and About War (2 units)

Introduces fundamental principles of the laws governing battlefield conduct of hostilities (the Hague tradition) and treatment of those caught in war's cross-hairs (the Geneva tradition). A blended approach requires applying assigned reading to contemporary conflicts.

“

Everything about this program was beyond exceptional. I researched all available programs for entertainment law and nothing else compared to what Southwestern offered so I hit the 'go' button. The once-in-a-lifetime experiences offered were endless. I wish I could go again!”
