

William "Bill" Huang
Housing Director
City of Pasadena

Mr. Huang directs the Housing Department which provides a wide array of affordable housing and homeless programs, as well as, funding for social service and economic development activities with an annual budget of approximately $40 million. Pasadena is actively engaged in affordable housing with a highly effective inclusionary housing ordinance, numerous transit oriented developments, an innovative housing first program, and a strong local government voice for new affordable housing and homeless policies and legislation. Prior to joining the City of Pasadena, Mr. Huang was the Housing Director for the County of Los Angeles, led the West Coast real estate consulting and lending operations for the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and was the Deputy Director of the nonprofit Los Angeles Community Design Center (now Abode Communities) where he oversaw affordable housing development and architectural services for numerous housing and community facilities. He helped to establish several leading local nonprofit development corporations including Hollywood and West Hollywood Community Housing Corporations, Heritage Housing Partners, and others. Mr. Huang is a former licensed architect with degrees from SCI-Arc and Harvard's Graduate School of Design. He has garnered numerous professional and academic awards including SCI-Arc's Distinguished Alumni of the Year, induction into California Housing Hall of Fame, and a Pasadena Foothill Chapter of the American Institute of Architects' Presidential Citation. The City of Pasadena was recognized by the Urban Land Institute with the Larsen Housing Policy Leadership Award for the top housing policy for a mid-sized city and was recognized by the Ivory Prize for housing innovation.
