PUBLICATIONS

BOOKS

THE SECRET LIFE OF COPYRIGHT: INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND INEQUALITY IN THE DIGITAL AGE
(Cambridge University Press, 2024) (under contract and forthcoming)

- Employing the methodology of critical theory and drawing on a series of case studies (from crested macaques, peeping toms and Navy SEALs to celebrity social media, Wall Street statues and Broadway musicals), THE SECRET LIFE OF COPYRIGHT provides a systematic analysis of the ways in which courts have negotiated privilege and participation in the digital age by adjudicating the vesting, scope and enforcement of copyright interests and examines how these doctrinal developments have propped up, and even exacerbated, inequalities along racial, gender and socioeconomic lines, thereby both harming already marginalized communities and impoverishing the law's role in the promotion of progress in the arts.

INFRINGEMENT NATION: COPYRIGHT 2.0 AND YOU (Oxford University Press, 2011)

- “Could you be committing $4.5 billion in copyright infringements every year? John Tehranian's witty, engaging book suggests that the answer might be yes, and explains why the fault lies not with you, but with the copyright laws.”
—Mark A. Lemley, William H. Neukom Professor of Law, Stanford University
- “Somewhere along the line copyright became a law everyone breaks. Why that happened and what might be done is the topic of this lively and thoughtful work. Highly recommended.”
—Tim Wu, Professor of Law, Columbia University
- “Professor Tehranian examines how the current copyright regime too often undermines the place of the individual in the cultural landscape, through subtle motions in policy and precedent. In an era when people routinely illustrate their sense of self with collections of quotes or streaming music on online profiles, Tehranian issues a call for a productive re-evaluation of the effect of copyright law, not just by industry, but by individuals themselves.”
—Jonathan Zittrain, Professor of Law, Professor of Computer Science & Co-Founder and Faculty Co-Director, Berkman Center for Internet & Society, Harvard University
- “Tehranian presents an insightful critique of the copyright regime, including its underappreciation of non-transformative works and its hierarchy of protection that privileges sophisticated, repeat players. The book concludes with suggested reforms that might restore the copyright regime to its role as a stimulator of creativity. Infringement Nation offers unique insight into the perils of a future in which harsh sanctions and overbroad infringement claims continue to diverge from societal norms, and makes a convincing case for immediate reform of the copyright regime.”

—Harvard Law Review

WHITEWASHED: AMERICA’S INVISIBLE MIDDLE-EASTERN MINORITY (New York University Press, 2009)

- A "consistently informative" work that "covers fresh legal and social territory"
—Publisher's Weekly
- “A learned, witty, and analytically biting analysis of race politics and race jurisprudence. A brilliant case that race is understood through performance and is hostage to the politics of fear. Tehranian's legal and intellectual thriller is hard to put down.”
—James C. Scott, Sterling Professor of Political Science and Anthropology, Yale University
- "Tehranian has written a compelling account of discrimination against those of Middle Eastern descent. His book is an important addition to the literature on race in America and could not be more timely."
—Erwin Chemerinsky, Founding Dean and Distinguished Professor of Law, University of California, Irvine, School of Law
- “Superb. . . [O]ught to be read by any Critical Race scholar, and ought to be part of many undergraduate courses ranging from the specific, such as Middle Eastern culture in the U.S., to the very general, such as an introductory Ethnic Studies course. . . . [C]ompelling personal narratives throughout the book . . . should appeal to the mainstream reader.”
—Steven Bender, author of Greasers and Gringos: Latinos, Law, and the American Imagination
- “A crisply-written manuscript on a timely and important subject.”
—Kevin R. Johnson, Dean, Professor of Law, and Mabie-Apallas Public Interest Law Chair, University of California at Davis
